

Tabletop one stop

An online store and community for tabletop games (TTRPGs, board games, war games). Will be able to purchase digital and physical content for different systems as well as a community aspect for finding groups to play with.

Persona of users

Nerds, tabletop systems appeal to a wide variety of users with the one common factor being they're a nerd to some degree, so the website will appeal to this wide subset.

Scenarios of use

A user wants to buy some sourcebooks for dungeons and dragons 5th edition. They open to the home page and see there's an option right there that will take them to the store page for D&D source books. They click it and are taken to the store page where they can add to cart and amount to add the cost presented changes based on the number of copies selected. Once they click add to cart they are given the option to go to checkout, view cart or continue shopping. They click checkout and are presented with the total transaction and are encouraged to login or create an account but they can also fill out their delivery address and contact details without an account. The customer selects "create account" and an overlay appears asking them to fill out; username, email, mobile (optional) name, password, confirm password and two checkboxes one saying "I have read and agree to the terms and conditions and privacy policy", which needs to be selected to allow the user to press the create account button and another checkbox that says "I would like to receive newsletters via email" which is not necessary to click to continue. The user fills this form out and the overlay disappears and they are back in the checkout they now have to fill out delivery information and there is now a checkbox "save delivery info" they select this and proceed with payment. They are given a few choices of how to pay they select paypal and after completing that are taken to the confirmation page with receipt number which they also receive via email.

A user logs in and proceeds to the community section to find people to participate in a game with. They open the community option from the homepage and filter the results with; System:Pathfinder 2e, tag(s): looking for players. The player is shown listings that other users have made which include basic detail such as time, system, online or if not where and upon clicking on any of them is taken to that user's game page which shows further details as well as an optional synopsis from the creator, they can make an application here. The user creates a few applications and a day later the other user that created the listing sends the user an invitation to the game which results in a notification on the user's side.
